Summer marches on

Outdoor music continues; few spaces left for Parks & Rec camps
2 Concord Insider — Thursday, July 29, 2021

July 29, 1927: Police Chief A.S. Kimball orders the Lapp carnival on the Bridge Street fairgrounds to close “forthwith.” The shutdown follows the arrest of two men who work for the carnival on gambling charges. Both are convicted and fined $50. The chief investigated after receiving reports of gambling and indecent shows at the fair, including one show to which only men were admitted. The sponsoring Elks Club will argue in vain for a reversal of Kimball’s closure order.

July 29, 1988: Developers announce plans for an eight-story office and retail building at the corner of Main and Bridge streets in Concord. (It won’t happen.)

July 29, 1964: Gov. John King establishes a traffic safety committee to “map a blueprint for a permanent continuing attack on the rising death and injury toll on New Hampshire highways.” By mid-August, 88 people will have died in New Hampshire traffic accidents that year.

July 29, 1914: On Star Island, the most prosperous of the Isles of Shoals, a 40-foot granite obelisk is dedicated to Rev. John Tucke, whose 18th century ministry on the island lasted 40 years.

July 30, 2003: According to documents that are unsealed in Concord District Court, Manuel Gehring told investigators that he shot his children Sarah, 14, and Phillip, 11, on the side of a road, 30 to 45 minutes from Concord. Hundreds of miles later, he said a prayer over their bodies before leaving them in a shallow grave with crosses made from duct tape on the chests.

July 30, 2002: In a testimony before lawmakers, Health and Human Services Commissioner Don Shumway gives a nearly complete rebuttal to a former employee’s claims of waste and abuse within the state mental health system. One allegation — that two of the 10 private community mental health centers have hired a dozen employees who actually work for the state — turned out to be true, however, Shumway said.

July 30, 1975: After nearly 100 hours of debate over 30 days and 35 inconclusive roll-call votes, the U.S. Senate declares its inability to settle the disputed November 1974 U.S. Senate election in New Hampshire and sends the matter back to the state. The move opens the way for a new election between Republican Louis Wyman and Democrat John Durkin. Durkin had suggested the new election on grounds that at the rate the Senate was going, “the term will have expired long before the Senate makes up its mind.” Durkin will win the new election.

July 30, 2000: John McCain, whose resounding defeat of George W. Bush in the state’s presidential primary sent shock waves through the Republican Party, formally releases his delegates at the GOP national convention in Philadelphia. “I will always be grateful,” McCain says of his time in New Hampshire. “One of the greatest experiences of my life was my time in that state.”

July 30, 1777: After riding all night from Exeter, Lt. Col. Gordon Hutchins, Concord’s legislative representative, bursts into the Sunday service at Concord’s meeting house to say that Gen. John Stark is marching west but needs more men. “Those of you who are willing to go had better go at once,” Rev. Timothy Walker tells his congregation. All men present leave.

July 30, 1991: Four months after Pamela Smart’s conviction for arranging to have her teenagelover and two other boys kill her husband, CBS is filming a TV movie of the murder case. “It’s not done in an exploitive way,” says the producer. “We’re trying to be sensitive.” Portraying Pam Smart is a then-little-known 27-year-old actress named Helen Hunt.

July 30, 2003: The Granite State Little Blue wins a 20-10 victory in the Senior Babe Ruth League New England Regional title game in Stamford, Conn. With the win, the Concord-based team will go on to the Senior Babe Ruth 16-year-old World Series in Jamestown, N.Y.

July 31, 2001: Massachusetts authorities arrest Gary L. Sampson in Vermont and accuse him of murdering three men, one of them former Concord city councilor Robert “Eli” Whitney. Sampson will also be charged with killing a 19-year-old college student from Kingston, Mass., and a 69-year-old retiree from Marshfield, Mass.

July 31, 1854: Samuel Wilson, believed to be the original “Uncle Sam,” dies at 87. Brought up in New York what the U.S. asked by passersby on a New York wharf what the U.S. stood for, one of Wilson’s workmen said, “Uncle Sam.” The name quickly spread.

July 31, 1983: Walter Mondale speaks to voters at the Archway Restaurant in Concord and is impressed with the seriousness of their questions. “It was a thoughtful meeting,” he says. “They didn’t want the razzmatazz.”

July 31, 1947: The Monitor is inundated with letters to the editor urging the city to build a swimming pool. One resident, Hazel M. Stiles, writes: “Oh yes, we have Bear Brook if you have a car and someone to take you over. Most parents are working daytimes and cannot take the children. Yes, we have a bus at the cost of 35 cents each way, making 70 cents and an admission fee when you get there. How many times can a child afford to go there?”

July 31, 1860: Sen. Stephen A. Douglas, the Democratic nominee for president, comes to Concord. The crowd at the railroad station is “dense and ungovernable,” and 5,000 people jam onto the State House yard to see the most famous politician of his day. Douglas denounces his fellow Democrat, President James Buchanan, for placating the South.

July 31, 1911: Samuel Eastman buys the assets of the Abbot & Downing Co. for just over $50,000, with more than half the money going to pay down the failing company’s debt. Eastman will reorganize the company.

Aug. 2, 2002: Four women hold a ‘nurse-in’ at Hunt Memorial Pool in Manchester. The protest is in response to an incident that took place in early July, when one of the women was asked to leave the pool for breast-feeding her baby.

Aug. 2, 2001: The last sheets of fiber used for heel cups roll through Penacook Fibre Co. The company is shutting down after more than 60 years in business.

August 2, 1776: New Hampshire delegates Dr. Josiah Bartlett and William Whipple join other members of the Continental Congress in signing the Declaration of Independence.

August 2, 1927: Granite cutters from Concord join others from throughout New England in appealing for a five-day week with a $9-a-day wage. They currently work 5½ days a week at $8 per day.

Old Rail Car

New Hampshire musician Tim Kierstead has just released his first album of all-original music, Old Rail Car. A singer/songwriter and well-known guitarist across New England, Kierstead has opened for huge acts like Willie Nelson and Keith Urban, and has recorded at the legendary Sound Stage Studios in Nashville. Now he takes the next step in his musical journey by sharing an album of nine original songs, completely self-produced, with Kierstead playing all the instruments.

Blending country and classic rock with a heavy dose of Kierstead’s fantastic slide playing, songs on Old Rail Car talk about diverse topics ranging from protecting loved ones to depression to the way the imagery of our unique, beautiful experiences resonates with us. Kierstead nods to some of his heroes, like the Allman Brothers and B.B. King, but tells his own stories throughout with heartfelt lyrics and truly fine musicianship.

The album opens with the driving rhythms and riffs of “Ride,” making an immediate impact with its energy. The ballad “Picture Yourself” suggests a joyful imagery of family, while “Heavy” offers hope for people feeling the isolation associated with depression. The album closes with the quintessential working man song, “Done... A strong vocal delivery, relatable lyrics, and notable guitar work abound throughout Old Rail Car, as Kierstead delivers his personal experiences through song. Learn more at timkierstead.com.

Phosphorescent Snack

New Hampshire indie band Andrew North and the Rangers released their new single, “Aditi,” and announced their debut full-length LP, Phosphorescent Snack, arriving on July 30. The new song is whimsical and upbeat and showcases the band’s instrumental dexterity. The lyrics are based on a silly conversation that Andrew had with his then 2-year-old son.

“I love being a dad and just getting to be goofy,” says North “My son and I were talking about being on a boat to ‘Aditi’ and just going back and forth with nonsense. The lyrics really started to come together when I started connecting the brilliance of this tiny kid with my own feelings of insecurity as a father. Sometimes I feel like he’s already so perfect, what can I possibly teach him that he doesn’t already have?”

The song is an exciting glimpse of the band’s new LP, coming this summer. The 12-song release showcases the band’s genre-bending style and whimsical sense of humor.

“Aditi” is available today on all streaming platforms, and at andheranglers.bandcamp.com. It features Andrew North (keys and vocals), Dale Grant (drums), Chip Spangler (bass, and Rob O’Brien (brass). The single was mixed and mastered by Tank Studios in Burlington, Vt.

Andrew North and the Rangers are small-town friends brought together by an adventurous approach to music. They hit it off quickly at local open-mic nights. Their debut album, Phosphorescent Snack, showcases their genre-bending style and whimsical sense of humor. It’s a reminder that amazing things can come from unlikely places.

Transient Desires: A Commissario Guido Brunetti Mystery

By Donna Leon
(272 pages, mystery, 2021)

Two young American women are badly injured and left on the loading dock of a hospital in Venice. Luckily, a hospital worker finds them fairly quickly. But one of them is seriously injured and in a coma. The women had been joyriding on a fast boat with two young Italian fellows, men that they met that night. What happened to the girls, and why were they just dropped off? Commissario Guido Brunetti and his colleague Claudia Griffoni look into the case. As they investigate Guido learns more about Claudia and her background. From another source, Guido learns that there is something sinister going on with transport boats at night in the Laguna. And one of the young men works for his uncle, who owns the transport boats. Guido calls some old friends and gets more information in his own distinctive way. He is faced with a particularly monstrous crime, one that will take all of his skill, and the cooperation of others, to thwart. In this mystery we get to see more of Guido’s family, his wife and two teenagers and their daily life. As always, Venice plays an important part in this story.

This is the latest (number 30!) in a long series. But you can read it as a standalone. If you want a compassionate, learned, multi-faceted detective, complemented by intriguing characters, a complex puzzle to unravel, and the exotic setting of Venice, you’ll enjoy these mysteries.

Drought Improves

As of July 22, drought conditions continue to improve across New Hampshire. As of last week, Concord is no longer classified as experiencing abnormally dry conditions.

Currently, 47.51% of the state is not experiencing any drought conditions, 32.55% is abnormally dry, 16.91% is in a moderate drought, and 3.03% is severe. Drought conditions continue to recede north thanks to continued rainfall. Precipitation levels in Concord are now 1.99 inches above normal for this time of year. This July has set the record for the 5th wettest month ever in Concord dating back to 1868, totaling 10.69 inches. Unfortunately, rain has largely bypassed northern portions of New Hampshire.

where drought conditions continue to linger.

Currently, 90 water systems in New Hampshire have watering restrictions in place. At this time, Concord is not implementing watering restrictions since drought conditions have been improving, our water supply remains healthy, and water consumption has decreased to normal levels for this time of year. Recent rain has reduced consumption due to decreased need for lawn watering and irrigation. Concord’s Water Treatment Facility has recently been producing 4.5MGD – 5.0MGD (millions of gallons per day), about 1.0MGD less than previous weeks.

Please continue to use water wisely. Although Concord is in good shape right now, we should continue to be mindful of water use, especially outdoors. Upcoming conditions remain uncertain, so it’s best to remain proactive to preserve our water supply and maintain conditions as best as possible. Simple conservation practices include minimizing irrigation and lawn watering, and inspecting systems for water leaks. Practice watering at night or early morning to minimize evaporation and consider using weather-based irrigation controllers to avoid unnecessary watering if it rains.

Drought conditions will continue to be monitored. We thank everyone for their efforts to conserve water. Every drop counts! Find drought updates and water conservation tips at concordnh.gov/conservation.

We are here to help.
Unwanted shifts in the spine, called SUBLUXATIONS, can occur when the body is unable to adapt to stresses like sports impacts, slips and falls, poor posture, car accidents and long hours of sitting, to name a few. These shifts can affect the nervous system, creating secondary conditions such as sciatica, migraine headaches, numbness in the hands, digestive problems and more.

Gentle yet firm, hands-on corrective chiropractic adjustments can restore normal motion and function to the spine and nervous system. At Crossroads Chiropractic, your first visit always begins with a consultation with the doctor and a complete examination, including x-rays if necessary. We thoroughly evaluate your unique spine before beginning care. Find out how chiropractic care may improve your overall health and well-being with a spinal check-up.
